

A Case Study on Systemic Lupus Erythematosus

S. Vedha pal Jeyamani¹, Ramya.N², Senthilkumaran.K²

¹Jaya college of Pharmacy, Chennai, Tamilnadu, India

²K K college of Pharmacy, Chennai, Tamilnadu, India

Address for Correspondence: editorjohp@gmail.com

BACKGROUND:

Systemic Lupus Erythematosus (SLE) is a chronic auto immune unpredictable and degenerating disorder, predominantly affecting women of childbearing age. The following case demonstrates the difficulty of managing SLE and the role of pharmacist in educating the patient which can lead to reduce skin lesions and fast recovery.